The biggest challenge we face there isn't from Antifa or the establishment or BLM or the police, but the fact that we represent the employed and those bearing many layers of responsibility, and most of us tend not to live in big cities—though that last bit doesn't apply to me. It's really easy to get people to show up for leftist shit because they cater to unemployed folks with nothing to do. Funny that even given that, Biden couldn't muster a baker's dozen at a rally.

For anyone that can, please fucking show up to DC, and support those that do! This is potentially the biggest moment of our lifetimes. Trump's going to decide what to do next based on the support he sees there and for those that show.

"... but the fact that we represent the employed ..."

I would have to change that to "employed and employable"the left is neither...the only thing the left is good for is fuel.

This is a good point. We're almost at the best possible point for this because the economy has been destroyed. More of "the employed" have become "the employable" than probably at any time in most of our lives.

Sucks to be out of work, of course, but there are an awful lot of us without jobs right to get to right now.

but the fact that we represent the employed and those bearing many layers of responsibility

This gives us a great power: if only a small percentage of pedes went on strike, the rino and the courts would have been forced to listen to us.

I'm heading out Tuesday AM from WA Sanctuary-State. It's something I must do. Never been to DC. Don't know anyone personally that's going, BUT I sure hope millions feel like I do, that they must do this.

Lots of good advice, other than repeatedly warning patriots to 'avoid BLM plaza' - why isn't the plan to surround and overwhelm 'BLM plaza'? BLM has a bill that's come due, and 2.5 million patriots are showing up to collect on it.
